Oregon Giant Pansy Seeds

(Originated and grown by Mrs. Merton G. Ellis)

Seeds should be sown NOW for summer and fall blooms. At this time of year they may be germinated in a greenhouse if available, or in a warm, light place in the house. After they have germinated well, the seed boxes may be placed outside in cold frames so the seedlings will not become tender, and then transplanted in the open ground as soon as the weather is suitable.

Of course, for the largest and best early spring blooms, the seed should be planted in late July or early August and the seedlings transplanted in September. Often the new summer crop of seeds is not ready for very early planting but the seed of the preceding fall crop will germinate nicely. Therefore, it will be worth while to buy your seeds NOW while we still have the 1936 seeds available and we are again making the following
